

Get Ready for Winter

Waiting until the snow flies is too late to protect your roof and building from winter conditions.

Proper preparation prevents damage

Snow, ice, sleet, and the inevitable runoff pose different challenges for your roof. It's all manageable if you start early, plan and maintain.

How GRS will help:

We will develop a customized, cost-effective plan to get your facilities ready for what the winter will bring. Services include:

- Full roof inspection, checking all seams, flashings, detailing, pathways and penetrations
- Repair conditions that are found to be vulnerable
- Evaluate, clean or repair all drainage points
- Clear loose debris, overhanging tree branches and overburden
- Pre-set markers on drainage baskets and skylights
- Develop a safe access plan specific for your roof
- Mobilization plan for staff and equipment, including a crane
- Safety set up prior to winter roof engagement

Why choose GRS?

Dealing with snow and ice on a roof is specialized skill. Untrained people using the wrong tools or processes will damage roof membranes and critical components. Our winter teams are certified to work on all major commercial roof systems—they are OSHA trained and understand the risks and best practices for snow roof management.

Built on safety, quality, and craftsmanship

Established in 1992 in Worcester, Massachusetts, Greenwood Industries is now one of the Top 10 commercial roofing and building envelope systems contractors in the United States.

With locations across the Northeast and more than 1,000 people on the job today, we have the capacity and the expertise to perform at any scale. We are signatory to 17 union contracts, because we value the integrity of skilled labor and are committed to providing jobs that sustain families and communities.

Greenwood began on the roof, the heritage of three generations of roofers in our founder's family. Today we are a full-service roof and building envelope company, with engineering, installation, and service divisions, plus our own metal fabrication shops. The Greenwood group also includes TWC Phoenix, the regional leader in the fields of waterproofing, air/vapor barriers, masonry services and more.

Whether it's one building or an entire campus, Greenwood Industries is ready to serve your building envelope needs from design to installation and ongoing service.

About Greenwood Building Envelope Services
